
V. LESSON PLANS FOR THIS COURSE

In the appropriate spaces designating teaching hours (fifty minutes of teaching for each hour), write the topics to be covered and the plans by which the course objectives will be reached. The lesson plan for each hour is to include both a summary of topics to be covered and the methodology to be used (not just an outline of the chapters in the textbook). The instructor should include in the entry of each day's plan the assignments to be made to students in order to fulfill their ten hours of out-of-class activities. These activities include reading, papers, projects, and other assignments designated to arrive at the objective of the course. For the standard course of instruction, complete hours one through ten. Failure to complete 10 hours of lesson plans will result in the application being returned. The Dean is responsible for oversight of the teaching process, so it is important to read and critique the lesson plans. We will no longer accept "Lecture/Discussion" as a teaching method or procedure; please be creative.

NOTE: Provide specifics on topic and methodology: e.g., Course 1007: Introduction to the Old Testament—Hour 1; Line one Topic "The Creation" (list scripture and/or textbook references); Methodology-Teach on the six days of creation and brief class discussion on the meaning of "order out of chaos" include student assignments and out-of-class activities.
